She had seen balls of fire on a night.

The prisoner then explained the system of table-turning, and question-answering by rapping. A number of persons placed their hands upon the edge of the table, upon which was placed the whole of the letters of the alphabet, and after a short time the table began to move, after which the persons had full power over it; certain questions were put to it, and answered in the following maner: Dean Swift says: "I never wonder to see men wicked, but I often wonder to see them Dr. Johnson was wont to say that a habit of looking at the best side of every event is far better than £1,000 a year. The sheadminal Emile was below, not daring to show herself on deck. By-the-bye, a good story is told of Dumas when at Palermo. One of Garibaldi's officers, shocked at the want of decorum displayed by the disgaise, remonstrated openly with the romance-writer, and objected to the presence of the lady where the young son of Garibaldi was hourly expected. "What reason can you give for this mountebank assumption of the male attire?" said the Italian. "Simply her ugliness as a woman," said Alexandre, with the most charming candor. It was a curious sight to behold the fat, gray-headed old mulatto, attired in fantastic guise, making regular sales of muskets on board his yacht, while the Circassian, in full costume, handed them up from below, and the little female-pirate, in loose trousers and stout soutesten that Alexandre has been dismissed. The success of Garibaldi placed him in a position that was without a precedent. Not only was he without a king, but even without a country, for Naples is merged in the unity of Italy. Accordingly Signor Massone demanded his papers, and will leave for Europe shortly. On presenting him with his letter recredence, General Cass remarked that "the Department regretted the departure of a gentleman with whom its relations had been perfectly satisfactory, and that he hoped that he would be enabled to serve his country in future as faithfully as he had served his sovereign here." On one was a young woman in Swiss costume, holding a basket, and standing upon a block, under which were two hearts, piercod with an arrow, and upon the block, the words, "Pres Celic." On the other arm was the word "Menizoz," and the date 1847; and above this, the figure of a man, dressed in frock coat, pants, and boots.

The New York Herald translates from the Independence Belge a pretty story of the totally unexpected inheritance of a large fortune by Mademoiselle Mathilde Benoit, of the Parisian Academy of Music (Conservathe Parisian Academy of Music (Conserva-toire) and her widowed mother. former and composer, in New York. As the story runs, a notary sent for Mathilde, learned that her mother yet lived, sent for her also, and informed them that uncle Peter, aged ninety-one, had died recently, etc. We copy the conclusion of the story from the Herald in the words of the notary:

Pictro Beneditti has lived a long time; he died two months ago, when at the age of ninety-one. He married fifty years since, but lost his wife and the sons he had with her. Having no direct heirs, Peter Benoit thought of his younger brother, Thomas August Benoit, to whom he had, however, not written since half a century. He leaves all his fortune to the children and grandchildren of that brother, if any, with the stipulation that if any of the descendants of Thomas are or have been a pupil of the Conservatoire, consequently the half of your grand-uncle's fortune belongs to you.

"And to whom will the other half of that fortune go?" inquired Madame Benoit.

"Mr. Thomas Benoit, my father-in-law, had but one son, my husband, whom I unfortunately lost six years ago, and we had but one child, my dear Mathilde, who stands before you."

"If that is the case," said the notary, "the whole of Peter Benoit's inheritance belongs to her."

"Has that inheritance some importance?"
inquired Madam Benoit.

"Well," said the notary, who had already appeared much interested in the young girl.
"you had better guess."

"Will it be as much as 30,000 france?" inquired Mother Benoit, who did not dare to lope so much. Better than that." "Fifty thousand francs?"

"Sixty thousand?"
"Still higher—go on still."
"A hundred thousand?" "Oh, you are going so slowly that we will never come to an end. Peter Benoit has left a fortune of 1,500,000 francs."

PARTICULARS OF THE CAPTURE OF PERUGIA. A Turin letter gives the following particulars respecting the taking of Perugia by

General Fanti:

The town was defended by about 3,000 men, who fought with great resolution. The garrison had raised barricades in all parts of the town, and occupied the houses, from which they fired upon the Sardinians. Every street was the scene of a conflict; but the assistance afforded to General Fanti by the inhabitants made the conflict much shorter than it would etherwise have been. A considerable portion of the Pontifical Carbineers contrived to escape out of town; the others retired to the citadel, which could not hold out long. Toward spening the fort capitulated, and the whole of the garrison, consisting of 1,600 men, were made prisoncapitulated, and the whole of the garrison, consisting of 1,600 men, were made prisoners, as well as General Schmidt, who commanded them. He is the worthy chief of the adventurers whom the Italians so cordially detest. Switzerland refuses to acknowledge him. ANOTHER ABSURD CHARGE OF PLAGIARISM-Another Absurd Charge of Plagianism— Macaulay's famous New Zealander.—Macau-lay's famous traveler, sitting on the ruins of London Bridge and sketching the ruins of St. Paul's, has been traced in several of the compositions of the distinguished author. The first appearance is believed to have been in 1824. A correspondent of the London Times, however, finds that the leading idea in this well-known picture was given by Shelley in the dedicatory letter of his "Peter Bell the Third," says: "When London shall be an habitation of bitterns; when St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey shall stand shapeless and nameless ruins in the midst of an unpeopled marsh; when the piers of Waterloo Bridge shall be-come the nuclei of islets of reeds and osiers, and cast the jagged shadows of their broken arches on the solitary stream, some trans-At-lantic traveler will weigh every thing in the scales of some new system of criticism, and the merits of the present work be recognized."

Delightful Scene in an Irish Theathr. A characteristic scene occurred in the theater at Belfast, Ireland, on the 15th ult. An actor, Mr. Moss, rushed before the curtain and asked the audience to interpose between him and Mr. Scott, the manager, who said he was drunk. He was hotly pursued by Scott, and they had a fist-fight on the stage, the Irish audience being in a high state of delight, evidently sympathizing with Moss, but pelting both combatants with eggs, apples and other missiles. They presently disappeared, but soon Moss darted into the orchestra, chased by a constable and policeman, and the row became general. It ended by the play going on as usual, and Mr. Moss performing his part, as if nothing had happened; the little episode having evidently refreshed the audience to an extraordinary degree. To break himself of the habit, he took up another, which was that of making a pledge about once a month, that he would never chew another piece. He broke his pledge just as often as he made it. The last time I had met him, he told me he had broken off for good, but now, as I had met him, he was taking another chew. BEAUTIFUL MARINE PHENOMENA .- The sea BEAUTIFUL MARINE PHENOMENA.—The sea at Yarmouth, says an English paper, has been beautifully luminous several evenings, and long, pale-blue phosphorescent flames appeared to rise up as the waves dashed against the shore. A stone thrown into the water had a most striking effect, the splash producing for a second a brilliant fight. Round the hulls of various bouts which were anchored a little distance from the jetty, circles of what seemed bright thin flame played the most fantastic tricks. In fact, wherever the water came into collision with any object, a most brilliant light was the result.

The silver mines of California are now known to surpass all others in the world, as much as the gold mines did, at the time of their discovery.

G. W. Kendall, late of the New Orleans Picoyune, says that for the last four years he has realized a clear annual profit of seventy-five per cent. on the amount he has invested in sheep raising.

Ahirah Leach, of Essex, Vermont, has raised four California citrons this season, which weigh 106 pounds, one weighing thirty-two and another over thirty-one.

The silver mines of California are now known and in the world, as man, dressed in frock coat, pants, and boots.

Suppocation from Foul Am.—A man and boy entered the large gas-pipes (thirty-six in chee in diameter), which were being laid at Knightsbridge, England, not long nince, for the purpose of comenting the joints. When they had gone 180 feet from the entrance, with candles, cement, etc., they began to feel sick from the smell of gas, and before they could retrace their way, were overpowered. The boy called for help, and both were at length dragged out with ropes.

make so true, "and joy cometi in the morning?"

Going in the morning! a glorious morning—when the sky is all beauty, and the world is all bliss; ere the dews have gone to heaven, or the stars have gone to God; when the birds are singing, and the cool winds are blowing, and the flowers are out that will be shut at noon, and the clouds that are never rent in rain, and the shadows inlaid with crimson lie away to the west. crimson lie away to the west.

We have sometimes seen a little coffin, like a casket for jewels, all alone by itself is a huge hearse, melaucholy with plumes, and gloomy as a frown, and we have thought, not so, should we accompany those a little way, who go in the morning. We have wondered why they did not take the little coffin into the carriage with them, and lay it gently upon their laps, the sleeper there lulled to slumber without a bosom or a cradle.

doves with downy wings emerging from nether night and fluttering for entrance at the windows of Heaven. Never has there been a hand wanting to take the wanderer in, and shut out the darkness and the storm. Upon those little faces it never seemed to us that death could place his great seal; there is no thought of the charnel-house in those young listeners to the invitation, whose acceptance we are bound not to forbid; there should be morning songs and not sighs; fresh flowers and not badges of mourning; no tears nor clouds, but bright dews and bright dawn-

We have wondered what there was for tears in such a going—in the early morn-ing from home to home—like fair white

Here the glad lips would quiver with anguish; the bright curls growing grizzled and gray; the young heart weary and old, but there, changeless as the stars, and young as the last new morning.

The poet tells of a green bough rent by the tempest from the tree, and swept rudely along on the breast of an angry river, and a mother-bird with cries of grief fluttering beside it, for her nest and nestlings were there.
